WEBER COUNTY LEADS IN THE CAMPAIGN AGAINST WEEDS

Weber county will probably stand first in the weed campaign when the checking is done in the state this fall, according to a statement made this morning by C. E. Pettigrew, county crop pest inspector.

"We are now making a campaign on a weed known as 'white top,' said Mr. Pettigrew. 'This weed was brought to Utah from Kansas, of which state it is a native. It is related to the mustard weed.'

"The state law requiring the destruction of weeds on all premises is one of the most progressive laws ever passed, for it makes it possible to have weeds eliminated from any premises and thereby prevent them from spreading to the ground of a neighbor who works to keep his place free of this form of pest."

"We have the same authority to enforce this law as the city officials in making a property owner clean his sidewalks of snow in the winter or to remove any other form of nuisance from his grounds. We can give ten days' notice and if the party fails, we can hire the work done and charge it against the premises. It is only in a few cases that we are obliged to go to such an extreme. One fine thing about the law is that it gives us authority to keep the weeds clean around old bridges and along railroad grades and other places that are usually good breeding grounds. It is from such places that the seeds of noxious weeds are scattered over wide areas until they become a menace to a whole district."

"In this county we have been conducting the campaign quite vigorously, and we have found ready support from the farmers. They do all they can to help us. We find many sore spots in Ogden canyon, where parties own the property and are out of the state. We are gradually getting the county quite free of this form of pest."

RAINMAKER CLAIMS TO HAVE BROUGHT RELIEF TO IDAHO

At last has appeared among us a man who has the remarkable power of control over the elements of the earth. This distinguished personage is none other than D. O. Marble of New Carlisle, Ind. No longer is the mythical tale of rain producing an impossibility, for lo and behold, it has been accomplished.

Forest service officials at Boise, Idaho, were surprised several days ago by the receipt of a letter from Marble disclosing the fact that he had commended the skies, from his home in Indiana, to shed its tears on the wonderful forests of Idaho that are being sadly destroyed by the flames of angry fire.

"The letter received by the officials at Boise is as follows:

"New Carlisle Ind., July 21, 1919.

"U. S. Department of Agriculture, Forest Service, Boise, Idaho.

"Gentlemen: After an experience of twenty years, I find that I am able to make it rain almost anywhere so I am making arrangements to have it rain over the state of Idaho and vicinity on or before the 24th of July to put out the forest fires which I head are raging in your state.

"I put out the fires in Montana two years ago and in Minnesota and Wisconsin last year and in Michigan this year on the 4th and 5th instant. I also broke the drought in Texas and Kansas last year.

"Please let me hear from you when the rain arrives, which will probably be on the 23rd or before. Thanking you in advance for your reply, I am,

"Yours truly,

"D. O. MARBLE."

A copy of this letter was received this morning at the local offices of the forest service with the added information from the supervisor of the Boise national forest that so far the promised rain has not materialized and that Mr. Marble must have been mistaken in his dates.

But the best is yet to come. Telegraphic reports were received from many of the forest supervisors in Idaho and Wyoming this morning stating that rains HAVE fallen and the fires on the Bridger, Wyoming, Payette, Minidoka, Teton and Targhee forests have been practically extinguished by rain.

What care the farmers now if long periods of drought exist. All we have to do is to send word to Mr. Marble to exercise his remarkable power and instruments to bring rain.

ESTATE OF INDIAN BEFORE DISTRICT COURT

An interesting Indian case, which was on trial a number of days in June in the district court at Brigham City, has just been decided by Judge J. D. Call, and is an echo of the upheaval of Washakie Indian land cases of two or three years ago. It involved an estate of an old Indian named Wo-gin-up, who as a member of the Shoshone tribe roamed through the northern part of Utah, Idaho, Wyoming and Nevada, and finally they established their camp at Washakie in Box Elder county. He died in 1904 and left a large parcel of land adjoining the town of Tremonton, valued at between $5,000 and $10,000, and the question before the court was to determine his heirs at law. He died at Washakie, and two old squaws claimed to be his surviving widows, and an Indian in Nevada contended that he was a nephew, so that it resolved itself into a triangle contest.

The case took a number of days for trial and was most novel and interesting, as practically every word of testimony had to be interpreted by Bishop Ward, who speaks the Shoshone language. Another interesting feature was to establish the various dates of marriage, separation, divorces, etc., as the Indians keep no records like the white man, and their only method is to compute years and cycles of time by moons, snows and events. A number of snows represent a number of years, and the moons represent the months of a year. It was also necessary to establish their tribal customs relative to marriage and divorce during the time involved in the case, that is from 1875 to 1904, which the state courts recognize and follow, and the testimony was that they married and divorced at the pleasure of the parties thereto, and that no formal contract or ceremony was necessary, and that a separation by mutual consent, or where one party left and married another, was considered an absolute divorce, and thereupon the other party was free to form other marital alliances—hence it will be seen that to prove heirship among Indians is a very difficult task.

"Andzi" was the first squaw Wo-gin-up married in 1875, and while her "chief" went to Nevada, she married another Indian, known as Charles Orlock, and Charles Abuck, alias Charles Pettibuck, and when Wo-gin-up returned and found his wife with another Indian, he did not grieve long, but married Seva-pitche, who is now an old woman, whose exact age could not be ascertained, but who is about 80 years. She described how she married Wo-gin-up, who came and told her that "he liked her looks," and brought her a blanket and thereupon asked her if she would come with him to his camp, and when she answered in the affirmative, he thereupon claimed her as his wife and they thereafter lived together until his death in 1904.

It seems that the married life of an Indian is not different from the white, for a number of Indian women came between Seva-pitche and Wo-gin-up, as she testified, and in describing their picturesque names, she designated them as the bowmaker's daughter, "Ide-a-up," and "Nan-z-hu," and also an Indian woman by the name of "Washio."

The court has just announced his decision, holding that Seva-pitche was the lawful and surviving widow, and is entitled to the estate of Wo-gin-up, who was represented by Chez & Barker, of Ogden, as her attorneys, while LeRoy Young and B. C. Call of Brigham City, represented contestant "Andzi," and George Halverson of Ogden, and J. M. McNamara of Elko, Nevada, represented Dick Crum, who the court holds is a nephew and a collateral heir.

WATER USER'S SUGGESTION.

The following suggestion regarding the conservation of water in the city and the manner of distribution has been submitted to the Standard:

"Editor Standard:

"Recently a new ordinance has been enforced requiring all persons who use water on their lawns or gardens to do so only every other night. The city has been roughly divided into halves, at Adams avenue, the idea being to have only half of the people use the water at one time, thus saving the rapidly decreasing supply of water. This idea is a very good one and also necessary one. However, I believe an improvement can be made upon it, by which the city will be divided accurately into halves and also it will make it easier to ascertain who the 'water hogs' are. The idea, which I am about to suggest, and which I hope will be considered and given publicity through the efforts of the Standard, is that all odd numbered houses use the water on odd dates of the calendar and all even numbered houses use their water only on even dates of the month, without regard as to which side of town—east or west of Adams—the houses are located. Thus it can be seen that on one night the houses on one side of a street will use the water, and the next night the other side of the street, etc., all over the city.

"Also, as a suggestion, that every time a fire occurs in this city, that a warning signal-whistle be blown to notify the people of it, so that immediately they can shut off their hoses, if running, and use as little as possible water for domestic purposes; thus increasing the water pressure necessary to fight fires with."

SKAGGS' MILLINERY

Many of our customers will be surprised to learn that we are planning to establish millinery stores in each town where we now sell groceries. There are several reasons why we are entering this line of business. The chief ones being that we feel obligated to arrange more suitable employment for our girl employees who faithfully filled men's places during the war and the fact that our grocery customers are compelled to pay much higher prices for their millinery requirements than we think is necessary. Our first store will be opened in Ogden soon. It will be permanently located in one of the Golden Rule rooms as soon as the room is vacated. Competent help has been engaged and stock is now being prepared for the early fall business. We know thrifty housewives, especially those who have found it difficult to pay former local high prices, will appreciate both the quality and price of our fall and winter hats. Watch for opening announcement.
